Official stamp issue of the Principality of Liechtenstein

After almost ten years, Philately Liechtenstein is again using the overprinting method for two of its existing definitive stamps. In this procedure, which used to be very common, the original face value of the stamp is visibly corrected and overprinted with the new face value. The price increases of Liechtensteinische Post AG have made this necessary. As of January 2022, it will increase the prices for A mail letters by 10 centimes (new CHF 1.10) and for B mail letters by 5 centimes (new CHF 0.90). This is the first price increase for letter mail in seventeen years. Stamps that have already been issued will remain valid.

The self-adhesive definitive stamp "Citril Finch" from 2021 will now be issued at a face value of CHF 0.90 (previously CHF 1.00) due to the overprint. This native songbird with its striking greenish yellow plumage can be found in the mountains. Its habitat is in light coniferous trees at the forest edge.

The "Peacock Butterfly" from 2011 will now have a face value of CHF 1.10 (previously CHF 2.20). This butterfly, which is native to Liechtenstein, is a member of the brush-footed butterfly family and is striking due to its black, blue and yellow spots placed like large eyes on its rust-red wings.

Four wild bees adorn the latest issue of self-adhesive definitive stamps. Around 550 species of the super-family Apoidea – with the exception of the honey bee – are grouped under the term wild bees. Even if the name suggests it, wild bees are by no means wild archetypes or feral strains of the honey bee. The "Large Scabious Mining Bee" (face value: CHF 0.90) can be seen from June to August. The pink pollen on its hind legs is conspicuous, as it gathers its food exclusively on field scabiosas. One of the largest bees in the Liechtenstein region is the "Carpenter Bee" (face value: CHF 1.10). It can grow up to three centimetres long. Its pure black body and blue-black wings make it easy to spot in the field.

The habitat of the "Mountain Bumblebee" (face value: CHF 1.80) is in sparse woods in the high mountains. This northern, hardy species, which is resistant to the cold, can be recognised by its yellow-black-orange rump. Unlike the other wild bee species, the "Cuckoo Bee" (face value: CHF 2.30) does not look after its brood and therefore does not need a collecting device for pollen. It lays its eggs in the nest of a Macropis bee like a cuckoo.

China's capital Beijing will host the 2022 Winter Olympics, making it the first city in the world to host both a summer and winter edition of the Olympic Games. From 4 to 20 February 2022, a total of 109 competitions in seven Olympic disciplines will take place at the three venues Beijing, Yangqing and Zhangjiakou.

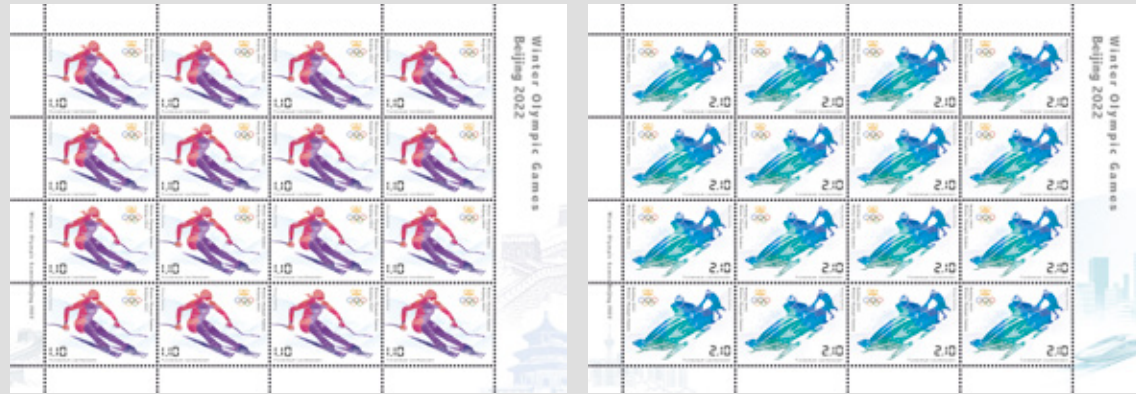

In keeping with tradition, the Philately commissioned an artist from the host country to design the Olympic stamps. Huming Wang designed the two special stamps "Skiing" (face value: CHF 1.10) and "Two-man Bobsleigh" (face value: CHF 2.10), each of which was produced by applying high-relief and foil embossing. The laser foil used for both motifs makes the snow shimmer accordingly.

In the history of the Olympic Games, there are now five athletes who have stood on the podium in various disciplines at summer and winter games. The youngest athlete in this exclusive circle is the American Lauryn William. She won gold in the 100-metre relay in London 2012, silver in the 100 metres in Athens 2004 and a silver medal in bobsleigh in Sochi 2014.

The good luck often quoted in good wishes can now also be conveyed through two stamps. "Horseshoe" (face value: CHF 0.90) and "Cloverleaf" (face value: CHF 1.10) are appearing as special stamps with exclusive gold foil embossing. In addition to the phrase "Good luck" in five different languages, a horseshoe and cloverleaf adorn the stamps as symbols of good luck, although portraits of a female chimney sweep and a male chimney sweep take centre stage.

The tradition-steeped profession of chimney sweeping is also associated with luck. In former times, however, people had a very ambivalent relationship to these professionals. On the one hand, the chimney sweep was terrifyingly black and associated with the devil, on the other hand, he helped to prevent fires through his work. On New Year's Day, he went from house to house and presented his annual bill. As one of the first people you met in the New Year, he became a lucky figure.

Today, the chimney sweep is mainly responsible for inspecting, cleaning and optimising heating systems. He helps to ensure that they use less fuel, are safer and have a longer service life.

Official stamp issue of the Principality of Liechtenstein

Philately is dedicating a special block with three stamps to the French actor, theatre director and playwright "Molière" (face value: CHF 4.10). Molière was born in Paris in January 1622 and named Jean Baptiste Poquelin. He is considered one of the great classics and helped comedy to become a genre potentially equal to tragedy in the theatre world.

For twelve years, Molière travelled through the provinces with a theatre group and acquired the language and dialects of the people. He became brilliant in using these as stylistic devices later. Back in Paris, the comedians were allowed to call themselves "Troupe du Roi" (King's Troop; face value: CHF 1.10) and present their performances before the King. "L'école des femmes" (The School of Women; face value: CHF 1.10) is considered Molière's and French comedy's first ever masterpiece. The unconventional way in which he subverted the rulebook of dramatic genres led to a heated public debate at the time.

Two new definitive stamps, printed together on 4-stamp sheetlets, are Liechtenstein's contribution to this year's Europa stamps. The member states of the Association of European Postal Operators (PostEurop) issue stamps on a common theme every year, and in 2022 it is stories and myths.

"The White Woman" (face value: CHF 1.80) is a figure that appears in numerous legends and myths in these parts. As a rule, she appears as a harmless being whom observers see by chance or notice by their having an uneasy feeling. On the stamp, the white woman floats through a field full of mulleins and slowly dissolves into thin air, just as she is said to have done, according to legend, when children encountered her. The mullein stands for fearlessness and protection from evil spirits.

The Liechtenstein alpine region is the setting for many eerie legends. A figure to be found in one such legend is "The Tällibudel" (face value: CHF 1.80). The spirit in dog-like form with fiery red eyes is said to have chased an alpine shepherd out of his hut. The illustration by Liechtenstein artist Eliane Schädler shows the scene of this tale with the fearsome creature in the background.

Liechtenstein greets Vienna

dieMarke.li

For more than 300 years, the Principality of Liechtenstein has maintained friendly relations with the neighbouring country to its east – Austria. This is reason enough to highlight this long-standing partnership with two special souvenir sheets. The souvenir sheets depict Liechtenstein Palace in Vienna and Vaduz Castle in Liechtenstein. The two wet-glue special souvenir sheets appear under the label "dieMarke.li" and greet with a hearty "Hoi Wien!" and "Servus Liechtenstein!"
